November 2018

Colleagues,

Enclosed is a resource put together by our campus Public Safety Team for all Colorado State University faculty and staff. This folder, nicknamed the Red Folder, has the sole purpose to make sure that everyone on campus has easy, desktop access to health and safety information at CSU. While the same information is available in various places online, our hope is that this will be a handy, visual reminder of the support that is available any time you have concerns about general safety issues or disruptive or despondent behavior by students or colleagues.

Please consider keeping this Red Folder on your desk or in a nearby drawer for reference, and fill it with any other additional safety or health related information you may want to reference from time to time. We've already started with a few key inserts that may be helpful to you.

As the folder says, when you have concerns about the welfare, behavior, or safety of anyone at CSU (yourself included) the best advice we can give you is to tell someone. We have a great team of health, counseling, and law enforcement professionals here who are always ready to provide support or just professional guidance when it is needed.

Thanks - and stay safe,
